

5 SKILLS

THAT WILL BE IN DEMAND
IN A POST-PANDEMIC WORLD

Positioning oneself as the best candidate to secure lucrative and steady employment both during and after the pandemic requires a keen focus on five vital and in-demand skills:

1

— ADAPTABILITY —

Maintain a flexible mindset that is always looking to improve. Employers want to know that a candidate has what it takes to adapt to changes so that they may best take advantage of market shifts, while protecting the business from getting left behind.

— EMOTIONAL INTELLIGENCE —

Understanding human nature is more crucial than ever. With strong emotional intelligence—the ability to manage relationships within your company, as well as with customers and vendors—one embodies an evergreen skill.

2

3

— CYBERSECURITY —

If you are considering learning a completely new skill, investing in a cybersecurity training course or certification could make you a sought-after employee in the new job market as cybercrime becomes increasingly sophisticated.

— DIGITAL SKILLS —

Even jobs that traditionally required in-person attendance are turning into remote positions. You need to ensure that you have the proper time management, organization, and communication skills, or you or your employer may see drops in your productivity.

4

5

— NEGOTIATING —

The economic realities of a world post-pandemic are more competitive. Budgets are tight, and businesses need to negotiate better to spend less and profit more. If you can show you have proven negotiating skills, you'll have a decisive advantage over your peers.

Put yourself in a position to acquire and keep the best job possible—

learn the five skills that will make you stand out from the rest and give you a leg up.

Read the full article on Infobase.com • (800) 322-8755

Find out how Infobase can help your students and patrons become career ready!

 Infobase